tained in and by the following statement:—

This invention relates to the manufacture of bread containing maize.

20

The maize meal is first mixed with cold water about eleven pints of water to nine pounds of meal being suitable. The mixture is then slowly poured into a vessel containing about four pints of boiling water and the resulting mixture is stirred and heated until it reaches the boiling point and has been kept boiling for from 5 to 10 minutes. It is then allowed to cool and is mixed with sponge formed in the ordinary way from wheat flour and the manufacture of the bread is completed in the usual manner.

25

After boiling; the water may be evaporated from the maize meal, which is then reground and mixed with the sponge as above described.

Equal quantities of maize meal and wheat flour are suitable but the proportion may be varied according to taste.

30

Having now particularly described and ascertained the nature of my said invention and in what manner the same is to be performed, I declare that what I claim is:—

1. The manufacture of bread by boiling maize meal and mixing it with wheat flour substantially as described.

2. The manufacture of bread substantially as described.

Dated this 7th day of January 1899.
